DEVISE MEANS OF AVOIDING FLOODS*State Department Orders
Investigation of All
Operations.*NO MORE LIKE JULY INUNDATION*Companies Cementing Old Apertures

Walls—To Finish Local Investigations Thursday.

State Mine Inspector I. G. Roby of Altoona, and D. R. Blower, of Scottsdale, carrying out instructions from Chief Roderick of the State Department of Mines, are making investigations at the various mines in their district with a view of recommending improvements which will prevent a recurrence of flood conditions brought about by the inundations of last month, at the Volant, Youngstown and Lemont mines. Inspector Roby said last night that the Erie Company, the Ramsey Company and the Superior Company, which already are taking precautions to prevent a recurrence of mine floods, have outlined their plans as proposed at the operations in Roby's district. Inspector Blower is making an investigation of the Erie, Keystone and Northern Connellville mines in his district, prior to recommending to the companies proposed safeguards.

Several of the companies are cementing old apertures in the mines and building huge retaining walls in front of the entrances. As quickly as the operation of the mines, now flooded, is resumed, this work will be taken up in a more formal and systematic manner and will be finished rapidly. Roby has conferred with officials of the various companies on several occasions regarding workings which have been depleted of their coal supply and plans for clearing them up. Blower expects to complete his investigation of the mines in his district by next Thursday and, after a conference with mine officials at which the mine owners will outline definite flood prevention measures, he will report to the State department.

P. J. Walsh, who also takes up the matter in the mines of his district upon his return from his vacation which he is spending at Atlantic City, Inspector Blower is looking after the mines in Walsh's district during the latter's absence, but the flood prevention schemes will not be taken up by the Scottsdale man for Walsh's district.

All State mine inspectors have been instructed by Roderick to make the investigations. The following letter has been sent to the inspectors:

In view of the fact that many lives have been lost through the mines of this county through the floods that have inundated them, I deem it an imperative duty to call your attention to the need of taking prompt action after the mine openings in your district, to see that water from floods cannot come in to change the flow of the underground. I suggest that if you find, on such occasions, you will call the attention of the proprietors to the fact and ask them to have them safeguarded. Enter on, please, in the department if there are any such openings in your district and what has been done to safeguard them.

MILES IN ONE DAY*Harry Moon and His Bride Accomplish Record Run from Here to Cleveland, Ohio.

What is believed to be a record run from Connellville to Cleveland, O., was made by Harry Moon, who made a run through Ohio on his wedding trip. Moon recently married Miss Ruby Forsythe of the West Side. The trip from this place to the Ohio city was made in one day. The distance is 195 miles.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Moon visited relatives in Youngstown, O., and Hamaburg, O.

Canines is Started by Constables

Connellsville and Ohio have recovered from the muzzling of dogs. The muzzles have not been put on, and instructions to the constables to comply with the State laws and kill the canines. The officers receive $1 for each dog killed and the war of extermination upon all dogs, no matter of what color, breed or sex, is on.

W. J. Behrman complained to the police of a number of the number of unmuzzled canines about the streets. He said he counted five of

WATER RAPIDLY BEING PUMPED
FROM YOUNGSTOWN AND LEMONT*Mines Will Resume Probably Next Week—Rescued Mule Dies.

"Flora," the mule found in the Youngstown mine of the H. C. Frick Coke Company a few days ago, after being in the workings without food for 15 days, died about six hours after rescuers reached her. Food had to be conveyed to the animal in boats and before sufficient nourishment could be provided the mule died of starvation. The carcasses of the six mules which were found huddled together in the mine, have not been removed as yet, owing to the fact that access to that portion of the workings can be had only in boats.

It will be some time before the Youngstown mine can be operated again. It will probably require two weeks, according to officials of the Frick company, to remove the water from the mine. The water is now under control and is being removed as rapidly as possible.

With practically all of the water removed from the Lemont operations, mine officials now believe the body of John Scanlon is buried beneath the rubbish and debris. An official of the company said today that all but a small amount of water in the lower most workings had been removed and that it was hardly possible that the body of Scanlon had been washed so far from the mouth of the mine. The Lemont mine may be in operation in two weeks.

A. C. Strickel of the Superior Coal Company, today declared most emphatically a warning that the Volant mine would not be operated again. He declared the mine was being put into the best of condition and that work would be resumed as soon as possible.

GAS COMPANY INSPECTS
LINES BEFORE COLD WEATHER*Will Build Six-Inch Main Across the Youghiogheny Above
Opossum Run.

Taking all possible precautions against breaks in the mains before cold weather sets in, a group of inspectors are carefully going over the whole system of the Fayette County Gas Company. Superintendent J. R. Apple is in charge of the inspection. The gas pressure is low during the summer and the inspection trip is being made to stop all small leaks that are liable to become blowouts. The Fayette County Gas Company fired last during the cold snap and the floods of the winter and spring when two-minute inspections of the lines from the West Virginia fields to Mt. Pleasant and Youngwood were made. The company suffered slightly during the floods.

To prevent a recurrence of the carrying out of a line across the Youghiogheny river, which occurred last winter, another main will be laid across the stream. It will not be located at the point where the other two pipes were laid.

Last winter one of the two mains laid at the mouth of Opossum run was carried out during the high water of March 21. The third line is to relieve the pressure through the other two pipes. The new line will be a six-inch pipe while the other are of eight inches. Construction work will start at an early date.

LATEST AT ARMORY*Militia Will Be Guests of J. J. Barnhart at Corn Roast at Early Date.

On account of hot weather last night company D drilled in their shirtsleeves. More drills of a similar nature are planned. The lure of other attractions kept the attendance down. Only 25 men were in line when it was hoped that 25 men would be present. Nineteen more drills with 25 men and one commissioned officer must be held before the company can draw its Federal allowance.

The blue winter uniforms will be issued to the men at the next drill.

County Poor Director J. J. Barnhart has extended an invitation to the company to take part in a corn roast to be given at his home in Dunbar township. The invitation is dated, "when the corn is ripe." The Company D members were guests of Director Barnhart last summer.

on 21st; Chalfant Gathering at
Shady Grove on 24th; Others Scheduled.

The annual reunion of the Matthews family held yesterday at Shady Grove park was a grand and enjoyable success, members of the family from all over Fayette county and from more distant points being in attendance. The weather was ideal and the reunion was pronounced one of the best ever held. As many members of the family only met at the family gathering the reunion is always looked forward to with eager anticipation. Thomas Matthews of Chicago, was among the guests and delivered an interesting address. Mr. Matthews is a former Fayette county resident and this is his first return visit to his former home in 36 years. He came on to attend the reunion and the greater part of the day was spent in renewing old acquaintances. Not for some time has the popular park been invaded by as fully a crowd as the Matthews families. All kinds of amusements in addition to the park amusements were included in and in the evening a number of the young and old indulged in old fashioned dancing. At noon and in the evening an elaborate dinner was served. Thomas P. Matthews of Dover was elected president of the Association and Mrs. Conway of Connellville was elected secretary.

Among those present were Spaffe and Mrs. P. M. Buttermore, Mrs. J. F. Torrence, Mrs. William Debold, Mr. and Mrs. Smith Buttermore and daughter, Mildred, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Buttermore and daughter, Ellen, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hager, Mrs. Louise Jamison, Donald Tarr and Mrs. Conway, of Connellville; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Buttermore and family of Scottsdale; Mrs. H. C. Wolf, of Petersburg, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Matthews and daughters, Misses Jennie and Myrtle, Mrs. Frank Matthews and family, Mrs. George Matthews and family, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Plank Matthews and baby, all of Altoona.

Tomorrow the farmers and their families of Fayette county will assemble at the Robert Junk farm near Mt. Pleasant, Dunbar township, to attend the annual picnic of the Union Farmers' Club of Fayette County. The farmers' picnic is an important event among the club members of the club and is largely attended. Robert Junk is the oldest member of the club and is the founder of the organization.

On the spot where a settlement was made many years ago and from where sprung 265 descendants from one family, the 12th annual reunion of the Murray and Weimer families was held at Champion yesterday. A crowd of about 700 was in attendance. Most of the crowd were members of the two families although some were guests. Not an accident marred the day and the outing was pronounced the best for some time. In charge of the reunion was S. P. Murray of Brownsville, secretary for 1912. To him is due not a little credit of the success of the outing.

Greene county was selected as the place of meeting for 1913. Last year the reunion was held in Ohio. Jonas Kennel, of Scottsdale, president for 1912, presided at the meeting. For 1913 J. M. Weimer of Altoona, was elected president. Henry Murray of Altoona, is the new secretary. The pioneers left Connellville yesterday about 9.45 arriving in Champion at 12.15. Following dinner, to which both the railroad men of the Baltimore & Ohio and the Indian Creek Valley were invited, the meeting opened with a song. Rev. Jacob A. Murray of Smithfield, led in prayer and a letter from Charles Pastor from Kansas read. The welcoming address was given by Irvin Fletcher. The principal address was given by Fred Weimer. Other talks were given by J. M. Murray of Altoona, J. M. Weimer of Altoona, J. A. Murray, of Ohio, J. K. Murray of Mt. Pleasant, Mrs. Fred Weimer, and Henry Murray.

The first annual reunion of the Martin-Hartman families will be held Wednesday, August 21, near Altoona. Mrs. Elizabeth Walton of the West Side, who is in her 88th year, is the oldest relative of the family in this section. Mrs. Walton is the mother of Mrs. H. M. Kephart, Mrs. John Tamm, Sr., Lawrence Walton, Herbert Walton, and Miss Katherine Walton of town. Among those who expect to attend the reunion from here are Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Kephart and son, John, and daughter, Sarah, Mr. and Mrs. John Duggan Sr., and family, Lawrence Walton and family, and Miss Katherine Walton, Mr. and

LOCAL MEN ARRESTED IN PITTSBURG, THEN WERE GIVEN NEW JOB.

Alexander Sweeney, aged 21, John Lang, aged 23, and Patrick Conley, aged 25, all of Connellville, were arrested at Pittsburgh Wednesday night and were released yesterday and were given new jobs. The men told Magistrate F. Gorman, they came to Pittsburgh to get work. "I will get you fellows work," replied the police official, "but I will have to place you under arrest first."

Yesterday the police officer told the magistrate that the officials of several manufacturing plants of the North Side, Pittsburgh, requested him to get them some men who were looking for work. The three men told the magistrate they were glad to get employment and would go to any place they were assigned.

Mrs. Duggan and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Kephart and family will move to the scene of the reunion.

Extensive arrangements have been made for the annual reunion of the descendants of Walter and James Chalfant to be held Saturday, August 24, at Shady Grove park. A program of vocal and instrumental music and several addresses has been arranged. Lunch will be served on the ground and all the family connections are invited. Mrs. Melville Boyd of East Connellville is secretary of the Association.

SESSION OF N. Y. SUPREME COURT*Rigid Investigation in Rosenthal

$5,000 Reward.

United Press Telegram.
ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Declaring that without reflection on local authorities he believed "an immediate, determined and fearless inquiry under grand jury auspices and authority set in motion by executive order is imperatively demanded by the grave exigencies of what might be termed an unofficial indictment of the Metropolitan police system," Governor Dix today named Justice Hoff to preside over an extraordinary term of the Supreme Court to convene on September 2 in New York. "Even if all the abominable things which have been charged are true, I regard the punishment of an individual of vastly less importance with regard to the lasting welfare of the community and of society at large than that the conditions which have at once led up to the final crime and at the same time made its consummation possible shall be pitilessly bared and a compelling and striking judicial inquiry."

All proceedings are to be under the supervision of District Attorney Whitman.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—District Attorney Whitman today offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest of "Mickey Louie" and "Gyp the Blood." Whitman said he was tired of waiting on the police whom he alleged were making no efforts to arrest the men.

FLOOR SPACE IS IN BIG DEMAND AT TRI
STATE BUILDING*Apparatus Shifted Around to Make Every Inch

Any of Year—Receipts Doubled at Clarksburg Branch During the Past Week.

Following the steady increase of business and the demand for goods made at home, The Tri-State Candy Company is engaged in a shifting around of its apparatus, in an effort to utilize every inch of floor space in their three-story building on Peach street. Manager Harry Carpenter said that the company is a week behind time in filling orders at this time and that the changing of apparatus and the addition of the new is to equalize the output with the demand.

Business, said the Tri-State manager, has increased from the beginning of the year. A record was made at the plant this week when the volume of city business was greater than that of any other week this year. This unusual amount of business in the heart of the time when the season is generally at its lowest ebb, presages a good winter season.

Business at the Clarksburg branch of the company, established only a short time ago, has increased greatly in the past few weeks. The volume of business done during the past week amounted to $1,000. The branch is now in charge of the assistant manager. The appointed manager, H. E. Durr, is now working at Altoona and will report to Clarksburg next week. Business at Clarksburg last week was just double that of the week before.

In preparation for the business expected at Christmas time, the Tri-State is already getting material and early goods in for delivery. No new kettles will be installed, owing to lack of room. There are from 20 to 25 employees at the Peach street building. With the utilization of more floor space and the economy of space in placing apparatus it is believed that within a few months there will be from 30 to 40 employees.

"I expect that we will employ from 20 to 40 workmen by Christmas," said Manager Harry Carpenter.

AMERICAN EXPRESS COMPANY
LOOKING FOR A LOCATION*Will Soon Be Out of an Office When the P. & L. E. Moves to New Terminal.

The American Express Company is looking for a location for a new office. The company is now located at the old Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad station on the West Side. When the move to the new terminal station on Seventh street is made, the Express Company will be forced to look for other quarters, as there is no room in the new terminal station for an express office.

Several locations have been considered on this side of the river but no definite selection has been made. Agent W. H. Thomas said that locations both on the East and West Sides have been considered. The American Express Company formerly maintained a branch office on this side of the river.

SCARCITY OF LABOR DELAYS
BROAD FORD CONTRACTORS*Are Nearly Through With Concrete and Stone Work on New Bonded Warehouse.

Scarcity of labor threatens to slightly delay the erection of the new bonded warehouse at Broad Ford. Contractors in charge of the work are hiring everybody available and asking for more. Men are being imported daily. The concrete and stone work has been practically finished. The contractors expect to start work on the brick walls within two weeks.

Arrangements are being made for the importation of about 50 masons for the brick work. The heavy rains last month held the work back somewhat but good progress is reported.

Railroad Opening Delayed.

Following an inspection after the recent heavy rains, officials of the Hochkamm and Northern railroad, building into West Virginia, say freight traffic can not be opened until December 1, instead of October 1, as has been planned. Heavy rains have necessitated the two months' delay.

BIGGEST PAY IN MONTHS
IS MADE BY THE B. & O.*Men Have Been Working Over Time in Shops and on the Road.
Business Expected.

Following a month marked by a scarcity of labor and of long hours and extra shifts in railroad and factory circles comes the mid-month pay at the Baltimore & Ohio and many of the plants here. The pay at the Baltimore & Ohio this month is estimated at between $30,000 and $100,000, more than has been distributed among Connellville workers for some time. For the past month the shops have been running overtime. Some of the machinists at the local shops have complained of the long hours. For over a month the men have been working in 19-hour shifts. Engineers on the Connellville division have had to take extra turns at the throttle. All extra men are working full time and the employment agencies have been besieged for men. Local merchants are expecting big business following the largest pay for many months. The railroad men are being paid by the agent through the freight office.

Another reason given for the large pay is the number of men now employed at Sand Patch.

T. E. MILLER MAY RETAIN ROAD FOREMAN OF ENGINES*Said That He Will Also Act as Master
Mechanic—Newton Cage May Be Brought Here.

That T. E. Miller, now road foreman of engines of the Baltimore & Ohio, is to take up the duties of both master mechanic at the shops here and the position he now holds is the opinion of railroad men here. No orders either for Master Mechanic P. Caniff to transfer to Baltimore or the promotion of T. E. Miller have been posted. That T. E. Miller is to be promoted is generally accepted here.

Before P. Caniff became Master Mechanic P. J. Harrigan occupied the position of both Master Mechanic and Road Foreman of Engine. Since then, however, the duties have increased and it is thought by some that it would be impossible for one man to attend to the duties of both. In the event of T. E. Miller becoming Master Mechanic, it is probable that Newton Cage, now assistant road foreman of engines of the Connellville division, located at Rockwood, would be promoted.

Rev. Father Gelhoff of the St. John's Evangelical Roman Catholic Church at Main and Eight streets on the West Side, has been transferred to Donora, following a request some time ago to Bishop Regis Canevin. Some time ago Father Gelhoff announced to his charge that he would be transferred, but later he changed his mind. Last Sunday he announced to his congregation that he had been transferred.

Rev. Father Gelhoff has been located on the West Side for about 15 years and was responsible for the erection of the handsome new building at Main and Eighth streets. Father Gelhoff this week confirmed over 100 young Slavish children, following the closing of a summer school at Leisnering.

Former Connellville Man Dead.

James Elward, a former Connellville resident, died last evening in a Pittsburgh hospital following an operation for an aneurysm of the brain. Mr. Elward was a son of George Elward, a former well known West Side resident. His widow survives. Two brothers, Samuel, of Uniontown, a brother Edward Elward, and a sister, Mrs. Sallie Sullivan, of Ohio, also survive.

Another Atlantic City Excursion.

The B. & O. excursion to Atlantic City last evening was largely patronized. A special train made up of 11 cars followed regular train No. 6. The morning excursion carried 700 excursionists. Mrs. John A. Armstrong and daughter, Miss Jean, left on the evening train.

That proposition of issuing bonds in order to remove the necessity of borrowing from local banks, has again been started in South Connellville and it is believed by some of the citizens of the Socialist town that the matter may assume definite shape by the time Council meets early in September. Following their trouble when the lighting proposition was up, the South Connellville council has not been doing a whole lot. A member said today that several important matters would be taken up in the fall.

According to figures given out by Borough Clerk Robert Roberts, the loan recently negotiated with a local bank is nearly used up and he says that it will be but a matter of a few weeks until the borough will have to make another loan. The borough has already used up a loan of $1500. On these loans, the borough clerk states six per cent interest is paid. Better, said a citizen, to issue bonds. Interest at the rate of 4 1/2 per cent must be paid on 10-year bonds, said the borough clerk. Tax Collector Charles Puellgraff is making headway with his taxes, but they have been only a drop in the bucket compared with the expenses.

"It takes more to run a borough than one would think," said Borough Clerk Roberts. "We are certainly eating up the taxes."

Explaining the heavy rate of taxation, Borough Treasurer T. C. Phalin said yesterday that the rate would be high until the last payment on the school property had been made to Connellville township. Recently a resident of the borough living in that sparsely populated section said that he would not pay his taxes. He said that they were twice as high as those he paid in the township. He also complained of lack of improvements.

Some of the citizens are complaining of the "Good Samaritan" view taken by Burgess Samuel Lee. One man said that while he didn't doubt the sincerity of the Burgess, in releasing the ordinance breakers and placing many a nominal fine, the action did not bring any money into the treasury. "The borough is certainly living up to the principles of Socialism," said a citizen, "but it certainly does not bring the money in."

Expenses for the Borough last month amounted to $600.30. Only a small portion of this was liquidated with money derived from taxation.

Following a report that he would resign, Robert Roberts, borough clerk of South Connellville, said that he would continue in that capacity. The report, he thought, was due to the fact that he had been away on a month's trip. Roberts has given up his position with the Baltimore & Ohio railroad here in order to better attend to his duties as borough clerk. He is now engaged in straightening out his accounts for the summer months.

Roberts visited friends in Sharon, Huntington, W. Va., and Youngstown, O., while he was away.

CONNELLSVILLE FIREMEN BACK FROM CONVENTION

Local Fire Fighters and Band Made Most Creditable Showing in the Big Parade.

All but four members of the Connelville Volunteer Firemen, returned home last night from New Kensington where they attended the Western Pennsylvania Firemen's association convention which closed last night. The big feature of the day yesterday was the parade, in which the Connelville firemen and the Connelville Mill band made a most creditable showing. It is estimated that there were 25,000 visitors in New Kensington yesterday.

Bill Laughs Now. Six months ago Bill subscribed for 10 shares in the Fayette Building & Loan Association. Everybody who knew Bill laughed, for, although he makes good pay, he had never saved a dollar. It was freely predicted that Bill would fall down on his payments about the second month. But Bill didn't. Bill discovered, as hundreds of other people have done, that it is easier to save when you bind yourself to pay a fixed sum monthly. Bill is doing the laughing now. His dues are paid in full and he dropped in on Secretary Geo. W. Stauffer, the other day, and subscribed for 10 more shares in the Fayette.

Child Burned at Reunion. A small child of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Matthews of Uniontown, was painfully burned yesterday afternoon while attending the annual reunion of the Matthews family at Shady Grove Park yesterday. Contractors Want Men. The Gillespie Company will pay 18 1/2 cents an hour.

T. A. Gillespie Company, contractors for the $1,000,000 dam of the American Waterworks & Guarantee Company at Cheat Haven, is advertising for 150 laborers at 18 1/2 cents an hour. This is 10 cents more on the day than the average price being paid for labor it was necessary, it is said to increase the wages in order to get men owing to the extremely tight labor situation. Carpenters and carpenter helpers are also wanted at the dam.

Harris in Cheerful Mood. Negro, Sentenced to be Hanged, Road Bible During Day.

John Harris, the negro sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Thomas Jones at Isabella mines in jail at Uniontown, seems cheerful despite the fact that there is little or no hope for his escaping the gallows. He sits all day in his cell and spends a great portion of the day reading the Bible.

Harris says he will make a statement before his execution. He is allowed to leave his cell and exercise in the cage each evening.

Prize for Poem. The Executive Committee of Home Week will give a prize of $15 for the best poem suitable for Old Home Week and $10 for the second best. ## HEALTH OFFICER BUSY Rottler Superintends Cutting of Weeds on Vacant Lots in City.

Under the direction of Health Officer B. Rottler weeds and rubbish are fast disappearing from the vacant lots about town. This crusade started about a month ago by the Board of Health is fast bearing fruit. The Health Officer has finished the lots on the South Side and has taken up the North End. The Board of Health takes the stand that if the weeds are allowed to grow, water will become stagnant and become a breeder of disease. Some lot owners have refused to comply with the directions of the board and are liable to prosecution, said a member of the board this morning.

BANKS AND BUSINESS COUNSEL.

A Well Known Bank Official Makes Some Interesting Remarks.

"The success of any bank," said E. T. Norton, of the First National, the other day "is very closely interwoven with the success of its patrons. For that reason, men and women should be able to go to their banker and get sound, disinterested business counsel—counsel that will help them to make money and invest what they have to the best advantage. A banker should further the prosperity of his clients in every legitimate way. That has always been the policy of the First National and we are glad to have our patrons consult us about their business problems or any financial matter in which they are interested."

HOW TO PRESERVE YOUTH AND BEAUTY.

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well-being. Every woman, young or old, should know herself and her physical make up. A good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book, such for instance, as "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M. D., which can readily be procured by sending thirty-one cents for cloth-bound copy, addressing Dr. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y.

The womanly system is a delicate machine which can only be compared to the intricate mechanism of a beautiful watch which will keep in good running order only with good care and the proper oiling at the right time, so that the delicate mechanism may not be worn out. Very many times young women get old or run down before their time through ignorance and the improper handling of this human mechanism. Mental depression, a confused head, backache, headache, or hot flashes and many symptoms of derangement of the womanly system can be avoided by a proper understanding of what to do, in those trying times that come to all women.

Mrs. G. H. Williams, of Lynhaven, Va., wrote: "It is six years since my health gave way. I had female trouble and all the doctors I employed tried to cure me. I was not able to do my work, had to hire someone all the time. Finally, I read in the papers about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and decided to try it. I had not seen but one bottle until I found it had done me good. I took it all five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and now I am able to do all my housework, and have gained fourteen pounds. I advise all women who suffer from female trouble to try your 'Favorite Prescription.' It's the only medicine on earth."

Miners Still Want Trouble. CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 16.—Striking miners today continue to insist that they would make good their threat to take up arms tonight in an attempt to drive away the special guards employed by the coal operators in the Cabin Creek district. The plan was formulated at a mass meeting of 2,000 strikers at the front door of the State capital late yesterday afternoon. The situation in the Kanawha field now looks so serious that orders for four companies of militia to leave the Cabin Creek section for their homes today were countermanded, awaiting developments.

Breakfast Monotony

—the same old chops, or bacon and eggs and biscuit, for breakfast—may be avoided.

For a change, try this ideal breakfast:
Some fresh fruit
Saucer of Grape-Nuts and cream
A soft-boiled egg
Some nice crisp toast
A cup of Postum

This will give you an ideal combination of the three principal food elements—proteids, carbohydrates and fats—in the most easily digestible form.

And it means a wide awake individual with energy and a clear head to make a stir in the world; it replaces that dull, sluggish feeling which so often follows the too-much-meat-and-biscuit breakfast.

The man who has work to do can't afford to be overloaded with the kind of food that requires undue effort on the part of his digestive organs for a time and leaves him with a "gone feeling" just about the time of day when he needs his best mental and physical powers.

Grape-Nuts food affords real strength of mind and body with little effort (or waste force) in getting it converted in the system into energy and staying-power—the power to act and to endure.

Miss Ruth Shaw, of Enger Leaf, spent yesterday at her home on Commercial street.

Mrs. B. A. Smith and two children, and the former's mother, Mrs. Mary Woodman, left last evening for their home in Uniontown. Mrs. Smith and children have been visiting with relatives in town for the past several days. And her mother accompanied her home to make a short visit.

F. D. Collins of Meadow Run was transacting business matters in Connellsville and Uniontown yesterday.

Misses Bertha Chuck and Helen Jones left on train No. 48 for Maryland to join a camping party. They expect to be gone a few weeks.

You have to broil a beefsteak,
You have to boil a ham,
You have to fry a whitefish
And roast a leg of lamb.
But when a package of Post Toasties
Is lying on the shelf,
No fry, no broil, no roast, no boil,
Just go and help yourself.

LINCOLN'S LETTER.

In these days when the letters of acceptance written by Presidential candidates run into pages it is interesting to recall the letter of acceptance written by Abraham Lincoln the first time he was a candidate. His letter was as follows:

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 23, 1860.
Sir: I accept the nomination tendered me by the convention over which you presided, of which I am formally apprised in a letter of yourself and others acting as a committee of the convention for that purpose. The declaration of principles and sentiment which accompanies your letter meets my approval and it shall be my endeavor to abide by it in every respect. I am most happy to decline the nomination and with due regard to the views and feelings of all who were represented in the convention, to the rights of all interested parties, and to the feelings of the people of the Nation, to the indivisibility of the Union, and the perpetual union, harmony, and prosperity of all, I am most happy to accept of the principles declared by the convention.

Your obliged friend and fellow citizen,
ABRAHAM LINCOLN.
Hon. Geo. Ashmun, President of the Republican Convention.
"That," after all, was enough. In Lincoln's day the party platform was taken at its face value. Later party platforms became largely a matter of form, and the habit grew up among the candidates of amending the platform and of interpreting it according to the apparent needs of the campaign as it developed. Lincoln simply said, "I accept the nomination. The platform suits me." And that was enough. He laid emphasis upon the party declaration of principles. Moreover, it was quite possible for a busy man to read every line of the Lincoln letter.

VETO OF THE WOOL BILL.

The Associated Press telegraph.
President Taft has vetoed the Underwood-Woolfelter wool bill and his opponents will, of course, make the most of it.

The message which accompanied the return of the bill without the executive approval explained with pertinent precision why the President could not endorse it, or, at least, why he was forced to withhold his approval of the bill.

No explanation would have been necessary if his opponents were not given to twisting words and distorting facts, but the President knows from experience that no act or position of his can be exempt from misrepresentation at the hands of his bitter and unscrupulous enemies.

So he goes all over it again in detail. He has urged the revision of schedule K in accordance with the report of the tariff board, reminding us that this report furnished us the first opportunity in the history of tariff making to draft a revision on a strictly scientific and non-partisan basis, and call our attention to the fact that the president's prepared tariff bill is directly at variance with many features of that report, although the report itself was accepted with scarcely a dissenting voice by all those familiar with the problems it raised, whether they were Democrats or Republicans, Protectionists or Free Traders.

If the President is to stand at all for non-partisan, scientific revision, founded upon actual figures concerning the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, he must stand for it all the time and not merely in fair weather.

As every one knows who knows Mr. Taft, the maintenance of the election could not influence him in deciding a matter which is purely one of principle.

He begs Congress not to adjourn until it has availed itself of the opportunity to revise the wool schedule without delay.

It is up to Congress in the Democratic House and in the "Progressive" Republican Senate, not to the President.

It's the easiest thing in the world to know how to succeed, after you have failed.

Even in telling fish stories some people never know where to draw the line.

THE LOST ARTS

By Isaac of Yukon.

Discoverers are slow about finding the lost arts. It is easy to invent new machinery but no one seems to have the power to smash the lid off the relic chest of the past and remove the rusty clothes from one of the lost arts.

In order that discoverers may know where to dig, a suggestion or two would not at all indicate an overhauled drain.

One of the lost arts was the rare ability of a pastor to preach his summer sermons without the postgraduate snoozers going to sleep.

Ministerial associations have been trying for many years to resurrect this lost art. Ministers have hit on the art of knocking prize fights over the ropes but they can't just hit upon a plan to eliminate the ecclesiastical snoozer.

It is a lost art to head off the fellow who borrows $2 to pay carefree to his uncle's funeral. There was once a remedy for heading off the chap who was always borrowing two plunks to see his uncle laid away but that art has forever faded.

No one has been able to "dix up" the lost art of stealing the neighbor's children out of your garden in such a calm way that the neighbor will not get mad and shout back in a carol and chromo-yellow tone of voice.

It is a lost art to calm the voice of church pillars who continually give way to their barbarous natures of trying to keep from sleeping during the sermon by keeping up a noise like flogging huckle bees in a clearing.

It is a lost art for down-and-out loafers to restrain themselves from being a dime to feed the flames of wrath. There was a time once when drunks had sense enough to just burn up rather than ask friends for a dime for a slug of liquor.

It is also a lost art to make one dollar go as far as two when buying embalmed meat.

BOISSON THEATRE.

Sarah Bernhardt and Mme. Rejane Next Monday.

It may well be doubted whether money alone would have induced Sarah Bernhardt, the greatest of living actresses, to play "Camille" before a moving picture camera. Such a passionate lover of her art, it must be said, would not have been willing to surrender to the glare of the limelight of stage and time and face the whole world as her audience. The cinematograph is indeed a monument, more enduring than brass and it is far more ornamental and useful as well. The immortality conferred by the motion picture is well worth having.

It is the smallest tribute to the genius of Sarah Bernhardt to say that her art loses nothing in its translation of the little strips of celluloid. The efforts of other noted artists do not shine as well in the motion picture as they do on the speaking stage, just as some talented singers please us in opera, but are heard to poor advantage in the graphophone. The splendor of Sarah Bernhardt's art remains undimmed in the photograph.

"To paint the lily" or "throw perfume on the violet" is no more of a successful and ridiculous excess than to pile up new adjectives in praise of the genius of Sarah Bernhardt. Of course it is true indeed that "one cannot either, nor custom state her infinite artistry."

Pensions Delayed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—One hundred and eighty thousand old soldiers, veterans of the civil war and the Spanish-American war have not received their quarterly pension allowance due August 1, because congress failed to make the necessary appropriations. Commissioner of Pensions Davenport was deluged today with complaints and inquiries from thousands of these dependent veterans but he was helpless. Fifteen million dollars due the veterans cannot be distributed until congress either passes the new pension bill or makes a continuance of appropriations under the old bill.

Operation on Woman's Eye.

Mrs. L. S. Kropp of Layton, aged 72 years, had a growth removed from her right eye yesterday at the Cottage State Hospital.

Abe Martin.

Uncle Niles Turner was able to walk down town this morning and exclaim a cantaloupe.
This is going to be a great year for amateurs in politics. Late Pullart who was elected treasurer of the Wilson club yesterday, has just been elected an "one" and never handled any money before.

LONG WAITED FOR WORK OPENS

Unnatural Mother in East Scotland Disowns Her Progeny—Vacation Trip Will be Taken by a Quartet. Buttermore, a Director.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, August 15.—Ground was broken for the new Young Men's Christian Association building, on the corner of Spring street and Grant avenue, at 10:30 o'clock yesterday forenoon. There was no silver spade used in the operation nor was there any other special formality observed. Contractor John Cunningham, who has the job of making the foundation excavation for S. J. Zentler, the builder, brought one of his teams over from East Scotland, and at the hour named the glow was started and the first cut was made. In the presence of members of the Building Committee and a few interested bystanders. The big grounds where the building will stand are now roughened with furrow marks, and the wagon was removing the earth from them. When the job was cleaned yesterday a wagon load of old tin cans was gathered up. The grounds were so large and the cans made such a small appearance on it that everyone was surprised at the quantity of cans.

UNNATURAL PARENT.
Over at East Scotland the people think that John Baum owns a regular society mother of a cow, according to what happened yesterday, when a calf arrived. The mother cow instead of being pleased with the advent of the little stranger was plainly put out of humor. She refused to recognize the wobbly little animal at all, and the calf was left to fend for itself. In a few days, John Cunningham, the next door neighbor of Baum, has a milk cow and this one, surprised at the unnatural actions of the cow across the way, adopted the calf. She fed and cared for the calf yesterday, but the sad sequel to the story is that when Mr. Cunningham sought for milk for his coffee that evening he discovered that his cow had given all the milk to the adopted calf.

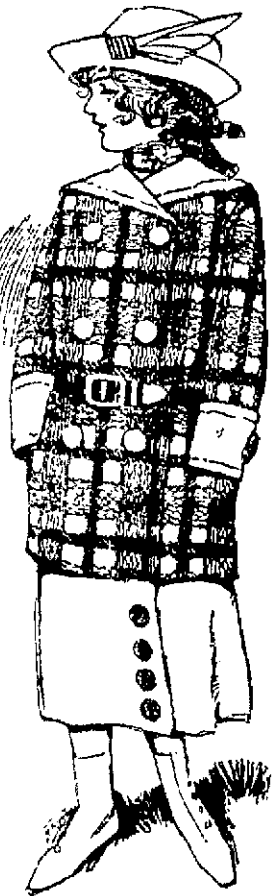

ON VACATION TRIP.
There is quite a family party going from C. C. Glenn's for their vacation trip on Saturday. Included in the party are: Mrs. Charles Glenn, the next door neighbor of Baum, has a milk cow and this one, surprised at the unnatural actions of the cow across the way, adopted the calf. She fed and cared for the calf yesterday, but the sad sequel to the story is that when Mr. Cunningham sought for milk for his coffee that evening he discovered that his cow had given all the milk to the adopted calf.

TOMORROW'S GAME.
There is a great deal of interest in tomorrow's ball game, greatly increased on account of the all added game of a week ago. The Verona team will meet the Scottdale Baseball Association team at Ellwood's park at 2:30 in the afternoon. Attendance has been increasing with every game and a large crowd is expected for tomorrow.

GRANDER TO MEET.
Everything promises a big crowd for the 15th annual picnic of the Grange at the woods back of Ellwood's park tomorrow. There will be two good programs, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. The program for the morning will be given by the Grange, and the program for the afternoon will be given by the Grange.

AT FOX REUNION.
Several people from this locality attended the Fox family reunion at Scottdale last evening, going on about 10:30 o'clock. The reunion was a very successful one and was well attended. The program for the evening was given by the Fox family and was very interesting.

MT. PLEASANT ITALIAN SOCIETY HOLD CELEBRATION YESTERDAY

Annual Fox Family Reunion Attracted Large Crowd—Negroes Arrested.
Special to The Courier.
MT. PLEASANT, August 15.—The Italian Fraternal Society and the Italian generally of this vicinity celebrated the Feast of the Assumption yesterday with High Mass in the morning at 10 o'clock at the Italian church. At 11 o'clock the bands played several concerts on the streets in various parts of town. In the afternoon a picnic was held in which was four bands and a large number of people gathered at Souter's park, where a fireworks display was given. A dance and other amusements were indulged in.

The annual Fox family reunion was held at Oakford park yesterday. The principal address was made by the Rev. Guyer of Altoona. The invocation and benediction were made by the Rev. J. L. Telegraph of this place. Miss Anna Shupe, of Scottdale, played a solo solo; Grace Loucks of Altoona, and Louisa Loucks of Findlay, O., played a duet. L. M. Fox read letters from some of the members of the Fox clan and David W. Fox gave a short talk. The persons from town attending were: Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Freed, Mr. and Mrs. George Stoner and daughter, Miss Anna, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Fox and family, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Fox, Mrs. Charles Stoner and son Ralph, Mrs. John Smith, Mrs. Kate Roth, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Swartz and family, Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson and family and Miss Jessie Bowyer.

State Constables Charles Rogers and H. E. Swartz arrested some negroes at Ellwood yesterday charged with disorderly conduct by H. Korbogowicz, a grocer of Carlisle.

The body of Ned Margaret McElberty, who was killed by a street car on Wednesday afternoon, was taken to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel McElberty, near Central. The remains will be taken to the Dunkard church this afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment at the Dunkard cemetery.

LOOKS LIKE OHIO & PENNA. LEAGUE HAS GONE TO SMASH

Pittsburg and Bridgeport Players Did Not Report for Game Yesterday.

There was no game between the Pittsburg and Bridgeport teams of the O. & P. League at Pittsburg yesterday afternoon, as the players on neither team showed up. The Bridgeport players, after Wednesday's game, demanded their guarantee and this not being forthcoming, they left for their homes yesterday morning. None of the officials of the league could be found in Pittsburg yesterday, and from present indications the O. & P. League has blown.

The receipts of Wednesday's game was $21.50. By the agreement with T. McCullough, half of this amount went to him for the use of Exposition park. He turned over to the Pittsburg players his share of the receipts.

Home Treatment for Tuberculosis

Consumptive patients need no longer dread either the fate that formerly overtook all sufferers from lung trouble, or early and often terribly inconvenient journeys far from home to other climates, or to some expensive sanatorium. Hundreds are now staying happily at home curing themselves at an expense beyond the cost of a few bottles of medicine. Here is one who speaks from experience: "220 S. 4th St., Pottsville (Pa.) I was losing my appetite and had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician recommended my case Consumption. I had been told the medicine three weeks I had marked relief, night sweats ceased; pain in the breast followed; cough became less; I am in excellent health now and have been completely cured for ten years. Two Ladies Dressed. Jo slipped off her gloves and tossed them on the table where they lay, long, handsome and rather distinguished—there's always something so personal in a woman's gloves—then she sat down and we stared at each other. The props had been knocked from under us, and we had landed with a good, sound bump, surprised, astounded, astounded, astounded! But not despairing at yet. The blow hadn't had time to benumb us, consequently we hadn't arrived at the despairing stage.

Jo has gorgeous eyes with long lashes that sweep her cheeks when she looks down, and she has a trick of doing that when she's thinking. But she was not looking down now; she was looking at me plainly perplexed—hunted, I'd say. I was inclined to be remiss—staring directly at my nose, which I'm rather sensitive about, with a slight pucker between her gorgeous eyes. The blow was beginning to sink in. I could tell by the droop settling at each corner of her beautiful mouth.

Two years ago when Jo was just bursting out of Radcliffe with all sorts of honors, and I was specializing in French, voice, expression, art, tennis, baseball and automobile with no hope of college and no wish to have any, my father died suddenly. It had been coming on a long time—for five years, to be exact—ever since my mother died. Jo was sixteen then; I was twelve. Jo mothered him and myself, as well as the infinite wisdom of her sixteen years would permit; read the books he liked, played the music he wished to hear, followed advice for motherless girls so that we would never do the wrong thing and give him cause to worry. But we never could fill that aching heart, and we knew it.

The copper muddle had done something to his income. It was necessary to cut down expenses, so we did away with the footman and six maids, sold the horses, which gave us no use for the green, fired the chef, put Wilkins, the housekeeper, to cooking, and kept only one car. It also put an end to any social ambitions Jo might have had, and didn't; and placed us on a lower plane in everything except our self-respect.

Jo set herself to studying Practical Economy, and housekeeping—and pounded it into me—did the marketing where we paid nothing for style, and began to cut out those pages in the Sunday newspapers that told how to use the leftovers. Then came a time when something happened that we could fully understand. A customer, old, reliable, absolutely sane, ordered stock and failed to pay for it when it shipped, and poor old dad went down in the ruins. He saved his reputation, but it was the end. He was too old and heart-broken to recover; even his faith in friendship was gone. He came home, went to his room and died.

After we laid him beside our mother Jo took an inventory. We found we had a home, elegant and imposing in the most exclusive section of Boston, parked to the garage with mahogany, most of which had come down to us from the wonderful supply on the Mayflower, and all of it mortgaged up to the hilt. Everything else was swept away. It had been going gradually for five years when poor old dad simply drifted. Also we had some stock in a western mine that gave us three thousand a year. Our personal assets consisted of our name, some family portraits and jewelry, old-fashioned but elegant enough, but worth little to any one but ourselves. Jo had a good education. I had a smattering of everything, and both of us had the advantage of two years abroad, and good, sound, robust, healthy bodies. I am not counting Jo's beauty or those gorgeous eyes of hers, because Jo never would use those eyes except to see with.

I don't know how she managed, except that she was a born manager, to pull out so much from the wreck. She exchanged our equity in the house for the mortgage's equity in the furniture, rented a modest apartment in the best neighborhood we could afford, put in as much of the mahogany as we could crowd into it, and sent the remainder to a storage warehouse guaranteed fire-proof, and locked it in with care and affection. She wouldn't part with a stick of it. Then she began to fray the edges of Practical Economy, bought a pair of shears, some tissue paper patterns, and set to work to make her own clothes and mine. She allowed us one luxury—we kept the car.

Now the final blow had fallen. Mr. Partridge telephoned us to come to the office. In itself it was not unusual. We always had to go down to look over the report and sign a receipt when a dividend was declared. But Jo ran her forefinger down the calendar, consulted a little red notebook, then shook her head. To my questions she answered: "Oh, nothing."

Mr. Partridge was a little old lawyer, bald and a bachelor. He received us with ceremony, bowed us into his inner office, where he raised his eyebrows to his stenographer and she disappeared. Then he faced an unusual time over the papers on his desk, cleared his throat until I began to feel like coming forward with a suggestion about drafts on his poor little bald head, and fell to rubbing his glasses abstractedly as if making up his mind how to say whatever it was he had to say. Jo began to get suspicious. I could see it in the way she sat quite, quite still and held in.

Then it came! The mine—our mine—was up to its neck in water with every prospect of staying that way, and we no longer had three thousand a year. Jo didn't wince when the blow fell. She's like a wonderful piece of steel, anyway. It took no more than a little while fully to comprehend, so I didn't faint or do anything foolish. After all, Jo and I had the same father and mother; it's the only vanity I allow myself.

Mr. Partridge threatened to cry, instead of ourselves, as he patiently explained the details. There was no hope—he didn't tell us until there was no hope—the mine was now abandoned. An effort had been made to pump it dry, but it was like trying to pump out the Atlantic ocean.

"We have the stock?" Jo asked quietly.

"It's not worth the paper it's printed on," Mr. Partridge replied with a groan.

"Look it up just as if it were," directed Jo, and rose to go.

"Have you thought?" Mr. Partridge blew his nose rather inelegantly to give vent to his feelings—"what you are going to do to replace that three thousand a year? Two young, attractive women left to make a living?"

"I'm going home, sit down, and think what we're going to do," replied Jo.

I began to examine some Japanese prints on the wall which I knew nothing about, just to get command of myself. I was shaking as you do when you go to your window in the middle of the night to see the fire-engines pass.

"I don't mind for myself—" Jo paused and raised her eyebrows toward my back. I saw it quite plainly in a mirror set at just the proper angle. I turned around.

"I've been studying Practical Economy, too, Jo," I said bravely. "Don't you think I'm going to be game—too?" Jo swept me into her arms as if none one were trying to steal me— which, of course, nobody was—and patted my cheek.

"You're game enough, by dear little sister, but it isn't only Practical Economy we've got to look out for now—it's bringing in something to economize on." She turned to Mr. Partridge. "Here's a girl," her voice broke a little—"a young, attractive, well-bred girl, who has to get out into the world and earn her living. We have to decide the best way she can do that to reflect credit upon herself and her family."

"And yourself? What are you going to do?" he asked after a minute. He rubbed his eyes as if he were hard on a snapped and the broken piece fell to the floor where it lay unnoticed.

"There are a thousand things I can do," Jo smiled.

"Don't try to be too brave, my dear," Mr. Partridge replied. "The reaction will only come harder." He could see right through anybody just as if they were a newly-scrubbed pane of glass. "Now, I'm not rich, but I want you always to look upon me as your protector and come to me. I will help, heart, head and money."

Jo put out her hand suddenly, and the handclasp was like that of two girls.

"And remember, too, my dear girl, that the better looking a woman is, the harder it is for her to keep her footing. Remember!" This very solemnly. "Now let me kiss you each on the forehead just as if I were your father, and don't fail to send me morning, noon or night if you need

Connecticut Maneuvers Demonstrate the Value of the Engineers' Corps and the Army Aviation Squadron

STRATFORD, Conn., Aug. 16.—The work of the army aviation squadron and of the engineers' corps is among the most interesting features of the maneuvers being held in this section. Lieutenants Foullos and Milling, U. S. A., have made a number of flights in the new double control biplane. They carried map making apparatus, and while one operated the machine the other obtained records of the positions and movements of the troops. The military authorities are highly pleased with the results as absolutely demonstrating the practicability of the airplane as a war scout. Why the engineers' branch of the service ranks high was demonstrated in the construction of a light pontoon bridge with which they spanned the Housatonic river, enabling the troops to push across with little delay after the theoretical destruction of Zear bridge by the opposing force.

BUILDING A PONTON BRIDGE

He jokingly climbed upon a hammock to deliver the kiss and even then Jo had to stoop, but it left us feeling that after all we were not so terribly alone in the world. I've often wondered why he never married.

So, Jo and I sat staring at each other across the room and tried to pretend that losing three thousand a year income wasn't anything at all; only so much as a broken vase, to be mended when we could get our breath. Jo's eyelashes swept her cheeks and I knew she was beginning to think.

"It's like so many keys on the piano," I said finally, breaking a silence that threatened to be tragic. "You try to pick out the ones that will give you the prettiest melody. And it's awfully hard," I ended, suddenly aware of it.

"I suppose I'll teach," Jo said, and then she gave way just a little. "I never wanted to think I'd have to teach."

I went down on my knees, took her hands and made her look at me.

"You're not going to do anything you don't want to do," I said firmly.

"You're not going to do all the sacrificing in this family. You're good, and firm, and strong, Jo, and I want to obey you, but away back in my gut-up there's a good, strong will of my own, and I'm going to have some say about this. Wait! There are many more keys on the piano; that tune sounded a bit, didn't it, dear?"

"Let's play a game," she suggested. "Let's prospect. We will begin with the things we would like to do and see how practical they are, then—"

"Or," I interrupted, breathlessly, "write a lot of things on a piece of paper and stick pins in to see how they come out."

"Perhaps that's as good a way as any," she answered much to my amusement. Jo has a dear sense of humor.

She got up and put aside her hat, then she picked up the gloves and pulled them through her fingers while the long lashes swept her cheeks again.

"The car will have to go," she said firmly. "That Practical Economy certainly had seeped into Jo."

"It's not so much the money the car will bring, but the savings of its keep," I said, just to prove that I knew something of Practical Economy myself.

Jo nodded like a teacher does when you've answered the question properly; then a smile parted her beautiful lips.

"Louie, you're a dear," she said. "I was afraid to say so for fear—you'd be terribly disappointed."

I don't know why she paused unless she wasn't quite sure just what she was afraid of, although she's always so sure of everything. But, goodness! There are street cars to the Country Club.

"Perhaps I am," I replied, "but Jo, I'm not one, two, three beside you."

CHAPTER II.

The Utility or Uselessness.

Before the morning was over Jo was sure on what she'd economize, although she wasn't sure what she'd economize on. There's a difference there if you'll just notice it. We had no way of fixing our prospective income. We tried to aim high and didn't know if we could afford the apartment or not. We might be able to afford a better one—even the car! Again: here we were practically penniless, for we had no income and no profession; yet we stood the chance of landing something in our ambitious mood that would make the three thousand a year look foolish. We had never worked; we didn't know what we could do. It was a problem that had the Servant Question tied in a double knot.

Jo, for all her cheerfulness, had a hard time to put into words even the things she wanted to do. I knew what she wanted to do. She was just about to do it when the blow fell. She wanted to take a course in botany at the Harvard gardens and specialize in orchids, for she had hope of one day owning a country place where she could experiment, though how she was going to get the country place she Lord knows, unless she married it, and she hadn't counted that far. She finally swung back and around to teaching. It seemed the only thing.

"You might," I suggested, "demonstrate automobiles. It's outdoors and the hours are not long. No new man just learning to drive can stand the strain on his back-bone very long. Sometimes the place is in the country where the roads are beautiful. I don't think it would be wearing, Jo, because you always know without half thinking when a person is going to change gear without throwing out the clutch. You could make him fix punctures as a lesson."

"Perhaps, instead of a man," Jo smiled, "it would be a woman, a frail little creature whom the Lord never intended to drive a car; and she couldn't let off the emergency, much less jam it on if necessary I'd whack her and lose my job."

"You may be cut out for teaching, after all," I mused.

"Or," she went on, "he might be a fat man with short pudgy fingers, wearing diamond rings, and on one of those beautiful country roads we might reach a secluded spot and he might—try to kiss me."

"Whack him!" I suggested. She is quite capable of doing it, too.

"I shall do something!" I burst out.

"Anything it's the same thing the other way round. If you were learning to drive, and he were teaching you? The position is just the same."

Jo shook her head.

"A man with diamond rings wouldn't be teaching me to drive," she reminded me. "I won't argue it. I'd be exposing myself, for I never heard of a female demonstrator in the automobile business. I wouldn't be exposed teaching."

"You certainly wouldn't," I remarked, thinking of the frumpy professors who—"But then they sometimes do."

Jo—the professors like, I mean. I've seen it in the papers. She had agreed with me, too. "I'd back you in any capacity," I told her admiringly, "and the novelty of a female demonstrator might get you the job."

"A female chauffeur!" she laughed. "How does it sound?"

And from the way she looked at me I knew she never had considered the idea for a single minute. I'm sure I went red, for I'd been in earnest, and the whole idea seemed so novel and possible. She leaned forward finally and clasped her hands. I knew from the attitude that she was resigned—for something.

"The trouble is," she mused, "it's the wrong time of year to begin to teach. Another month and all the schools will be over."

"Good!" I said heartily. "So that's out."

I just wouldn't think of Jo as a teacher! She'd grow old and gray, and have to put spectacles over the gorgeous eyes, and fall into the habit of talking theorems and such stuff. I hate theorems!

"But then I may need time for preparation," she went on, not hearing me, I guess—at least not paying the slightest attention if she did. "You see I don't know a thing about it, and then, too, I'll have to get the position."

"Well, where do I come in in this scheme of things?" I asked. "What am I to be doing all this time?"

Jo drew in her breath sharply as if something hurt, then put out her hands as if I had tried to strike her.

"I shall do something!" I burst out. "Surely, Jo, you don't think I'm a little thingy and can't?"

"You're too young," she began.

"Young! Bosh!" I wouldn't let her go on with that. "Why, I'm nineteen!" I said it as if I'd been a thousand.

"My mother was married when she was nineteen. Why, Jo, when she was as old as you, you were three years old." I was getting rather mixed, I was so anxious to impress her.

"Poor old me," Jo sighed, then she laughed so heartily I knew I grew red again. "And I've been thinking all this time that I was just getting a look-in on life. Why, I'm an old maid! And here I've never even had a thought of getting married."

And, sure enough, she never had. She never had had as close as a fourth cousin connection with a romance. I looked at her suddenly and wondered how in the world she had managed to escape; how she had kept some one from running off with her bodily.

"I suppose I've wasted my time," Jo went on. "I know I have thrown away chances. I might have married long ago and settled the future for both of us."

"You might have," I agreed, "but introspection, dear, won't take the place of our three thousand a year. Which argument must have made Practical Something or other sit up and take notice. 'Now just don't you speak to me for ten minutes, and I'll tell you at the end of that time what I am going to do.'"

I put out my hand toward the newspapers just to brush up on the things there are to be done in this world. After consideration I selected a held-over Transcript as I wanted the very best advice going. The first thing that met my eye was: "The dancer who is supposed to have caused the downfall—" I turned over hastily. After all I was looking for the war column. Two minutes had not passed before I landed on the very thing:

Wanted—Companion. Wealthy woman recovering from nervous prostration, wants young, good-looking, well-bred, well-educated, well-read, tactful girl for companion. Must speak French, bridge, foot-ball, base-ball, automobile and golf. Prefer a musician who sings. Name your own salary.

"Well, I'm it!" I exclaimed with conviction, and passed the paper on to Jo. "You would think that woman had known my qualifications when she put that in the paper."

Jo read it, and I do believe she would have whistled if she had known how. From her expression I thought she thought it was the very thing.

"How much salary shall I name?" I asked excitedly.

"She doesn't want much!" Jo said with hauteur—just that, truly—not hearing my question, anyhow not answering it. "Well, I should say who would let any one name the salary. Where does she expect to get—?"

I was jabbing my chest with my two forefingers and distorting my face to make Jo see I was it, because she didn't seem to listen to what I said.

"My goodness!" she exclaimed. "Do you qualify for all that?" She looked at the paper helplessly—the only time I ever saw Jo helpless about anything.

"You've always told me that good looks are a matter of opinion," I replied, "so barring looks and skimming in on golf—I know my A-B-C's of golf. I drive fairly, but I'm too wisely to putt—why I think I might venture to say I do qualify for the rest. You see she doesn't say I've got to do all those things; I've just got to speak 'em."

"Don't bite off your words, Louie," she said in that calm, cool way of hers that's lots more effective than a slap. "Breathe a little."

"I'll remember, dear," I promised. I'd have promised her anything right at that minute.

"You're not tactful," she contradicted flatly, although she always tells me never to contradict anything flatly.

"I could be if I tried," I returned. "I know the rules."

"I wonder if she would consider you a musician, and if she would think you could sing? You've slumped at everything generally, but—"

"I'm sure I could squeeze in," I told her. "She only prefers a musician who can sing."

Now Jo knows my throat is a regular Trilby throat. The bridge of my nose is good and my diaphragm—from tennis and swimming—is almost as good as Tetrazzini's.

"Nervous prostration!" she mused finally, gazing at the lines she didn't see. "A vampire who'll take the best of you and will leave you high and dry in the same condition as herself. I guess not."

"Why I have the constitution of an ox," I argued. "I haven't a nerve in my body. I—"

She got up and made an excursion around the room.

"Not now," she interrupted. "Please, may I try? May I at least answer it?" I pleaded.

"It won't do any harm to answer it," she agreed, and I pounced on her so suddenly with a kiss that she landed on her nose. "But—" She held up a forefinger. "Oh! Why not write an advertisement yourself, dictate your own terms, and let somebody come to you?"

"Oh, I say, Jo, but that's two birds in the bush," I was thinking of the salary part.

"No harm trying," she smiled, "and I would call it another iron in the fire. You haven't the bird in the hand yet, and anyhow it may not be at all the kind of bird that I am going to like."

You will notice that she said "I" instead of "you." I suppose she knew the salary part made me blind as to which kind of a bird it was.

"True," I said, trying to look as wise as she did.

I went to the desk to write one advertisement and answer the other. Of course I answered first. I chewed the end of the pen-staff reflectively, which I know is awfully bad form. Then I looked at Jo.

"Do you think?" I asked, "I dare name three thousand a year?"

CHAPTER III.

Secretary of Frivolous Affairs.

I know there's an all-wise Providence who directs the universe so much better than we could do it, although sometimes it seems that Providence gets twisted; because the things we aim at we don't get, and the things we don't aim at we do get.

I came back from my interview with the wealthy woman who was recovering from nervous prostration and just sat down and cried. She lived in a gilded prison on Commonwealth avenue with all the windows tight-shut for fear of drafts in the uncertain spring weather. No wonder she had nervous prostration. Anybody's nerves would shirk for air in that place. In exchange for what she demanded and knowing I had named three thousand a year, she offered me eight hundred with the reservation of letting me go on two weeks' notice. I began practicing tact on the spot and left the matter pending; then I went out into God's sunshine, took some deep-sea breaths of the uncertain spring weather, and when I got back home, poured out the whole mean thing on Jo's motherly bosom. Then—well I've said it—I sat down and cried. I always do cry when I'm angry.

I had hardly dried my eyes and was trying to get rid of the horrid tear-streaks down my face—I'm a fright when I cry—when the bell jangled and the postman came in with a "special." I looked at the letter and for one wild instant I thought perhaps the mine had been pumped dry. Then I noticed that it was directed to the initials we had signed to the advertisement. The "special" was written from the Somerset, and I stood there gazing idiotically at the arrival, turning it over and over trying to guess who it might be from—like every woman does, except Jo—when Jo came in and I ripped it open. I looked at the name first, of course, and my knees gave way. I passed the letter on to Jo.

"Maria Crowninshield Hazard!" she exclaimed. She, too, had read the name first—Jo is familiar after all. "Mrs. Frederick Hazard!"

"Do you think it's actually true she wants a companion?" I asked.

"Why not?" demanded Jo, and she read the letter, which of course was the only way to find out.

"I didn't know she lived at the Somerset," I remarked, my mind grasping only tangible things.

"She's doing over her house. Her daughter came out this winter. Surely, you've seen about the reception next week, presumably to announce an engagement?"

"I do hope she doesn't want me for a sort of sublimated lady's maid," I cried.

"You certainly would be an accomplished lady's maid," Jo replied sarcastically, and she was seldom sarcastic.

"True," I laughed but Jo didn't. The note was short and to the point, but it had a cordial undertone that I knew Jo liked. Mrs. Hazard wanted me to telephone to her as soon as the note reached me and arrange an interview as quickly as possible. She couldn't explain in a letter just what she wanted, as her proposition was to be rather intricate and unusual, but she thought from the tone of the advertisement that I'd do. I had borrowed that about speaking French, bridge, foot-ball, etc., etc., I pondered over the "intricate and unusual," but in all the wild flights of my imagination I couldn't land on anything that seemed to be just that, unless she wanted me to do all those things. Gracious! I'd have to draw the line at foot-ball and base-ball; I could root, but—

Now I've always denied that I had nerves. I take it back. I'm sure I wore a groove in the floor up and down the hallway that afternoon before she came. I couldn't sit down long enough as her proposition was to be rather intricate and unusual, but she thought from the tone of the advertisement that I'd do. I had borrowed that about speaking French, bridge, foot-ball, etc., etc., I pondered over the "intricate and unusual," but in all the wild flights of my imagination I couldn't land on anything that seemed to be just that, unless she wanted me to do all those things. Gracious! I'd have to draw the line at foot-ball and base-ball; I could root, but—

Gracious! I'd have to draw the line at foot-ball and base-ball; I could root, but—

I had searched stray newspapers and magazines for a possible picture of her, as much to kill time as to satisfy an impatient curiosity, but the only one I could find was a snap-shot in a Sunday newspaper, taken at a charity bazaar, showing her with one foot in the air and her mouth open. I crumpled the paper and flung it into a corner much to Jo's disgust, for she prides herself on the neat way I've been brought up, but I kept thinking of it as I heard the elevator going down and then coming up again. I giggled hysterically, and my mouth was still stretched in a broad grin when Mrs. Maria Crowninshield Hazard entered. It's another instance of an all-wise Providence taking care of us when we can't take care of ourselves, for she liked the smile—I knew it from the way she smiled back and squeezed my hand—and from the minute I looked into her beaming, fat face—it is fat and I'll have to say so—I knew if she wanted me for lady's maid I'd try to qualify for the job.

She examined first myself, then Jo through her forefinger, but I wasn't one whit frightened; she looked so motherly.

"But which one is Miss Codman?" she asked.

"I am Miss Codman—Josephine Codman," Jo answered her, "but my sister, Louie, is the one you came to see."

She looked me over again and a thought struck me.

"If you want Jo," I said hastily, "it's just the same. It's all in the family." But I could see Jo a lady's maid. Goodness!

"I want the one who speaks French, bridge, foot-ball, base-ball, automobile and golf," she smiled. "It's an experiment."

She sat down and waved the long nettle at the open window.

Hofman Back In Pittsburgh.

Artie Hofman, formerly crack outfielder and star all-around utility man for the Chicago Cubs, is back in the camp of the Pittsburgh Pirates, after an absence of nearly two months. The matter of reinstatement remains to be attended to before Hofman can jump into the game, but as in this case it is a question for the Pittsburgh club, and not for the league authorities to decide, the suspension probably will be lifted at once and the player restored to good standing.

Craig Dies From Injury.

William Craig, 24 years old, pitcher for the Steubenville Pottery team, died at Steubenville, yesterday, from injuries sustained while demonstrating how to pitch a ball. The swing of his body snapped one of his legs and he was otherwise fatally injured.

Baseball Notes.

Catcher Lew McAllister, formerly of the Detroit Tigers, has been purchased from Buffalo by the Baltimore Club.

Bill Sweeney, of the Boston Braves, is crowding Zimmerman, of the Cubs, for the batting honors in the National League.

Joe Lake, who was a failure in New York and St. Louis, is now pitching championship ball for Hugh Jennings in Detroit.

The Cincinnati fans have no mercy on a loser, and the Redlegs have a tough job playing ball at home since the team began to slip.

Wichita Falls has the honor of owning the first championship team of the season, the Oilers having won the pennant in the Texas-Oklahoma League.

The Dubuque Club, of the Three-L League, disposed of two classy players when it sold Del Faddock to the Highlanders and Ernie Johnson to the White Sox.

Pitcher Demaree, recently sold by the Mobile Club to the Giants, was a member of the Newark, N. J., team in 1908 when George Stallings was manager of the team.

Pitcher Ray Keating, of the Lawrence New England League team, who has been sold to the New York Americans, has won twenty and lost nine games this season.

Clyde Milan, of the Washington team, has a chance to beat Ty Cobb's record of 83 stolen bases, made in 1911. Up to August 4, Clyde had pilfered 83 sacks.

The Clarksville team took the lead in the Kitty League yesterday in the season, and have snuck to the top of the percentage column like a porcupine on an angry Swede.

The Giants will have to step lively if they expect to equal the Cubs' record of games won in a season. In 1908 the Cubs set the mark at 116 victories and 36 defeats.

The feat of pitching ninety-eight innings without letting in a run, was for "Buster" Brown, the Shenoygan pitcher, a chance to display his goods with the Milwaukee team.

It is not often that a star ball player is seized with such a case of rattle as Ivan Olson, the Cleveland shortstop, recently, when he made seven errors in a double-header.

Frank Klaus will take another trip to France as he has signed to meet George Carpentier in Paris Oct. 5.

DOON WANTS GUARDIAN FOR SCOTTSVILLE PLAYER, NOW WAYWARD HURLER.

Manager Doon of the Phillies is in the field for a guardian, not for himself but for young Horne, the physically big pitcher he secured from Conneltsville at the same time Ritter was annexed to Doon's team.

Horne is a second "Rube" Waddell. He is reputed as being some pitcher, but he seems shy of big league parks. He was to have reported at Fogel Field some time ago, but when the time for reporting came Horne had disappeared. Horne next made his appearance in Pittsburgh and Doon saw him in the streets. He promised to report when the team arrived in Philadelphia, but has failed to report. Now Doon wants a guardian who will locate Horne and keep him located long enough to get him into a uniform.

Horne has been at his home at Scottsdale claiming that he is too ill to join his team.
